Agricultural and Extension Education
M.S. in Education Non-Thesis Option
30 semester hours

This option is designed to enhance the careers of those interested in the educational professions of agriculture and natural resources. Regardless if one is seeking employment in public school teaching, community college instruction, Cooperative Extension, or training and development in agribusiness; students gain valuable knowledge and experience in designing, implementing, and evaluating educational programs. In addition, graduates of the program command tremendous depth of the teaching and learning process. Many students in this option combine the requirements for graduate education and teacher certification.

* See an Agricultural and Extension Education graduate advisor for specifics on coursework and additional requirements outside of coursework.
